193 golfers traded food for a round of golf in Volunteers of America's 10th Annual Turkey Shoot.

The generous and dedicated players each donated a 20-pound or larger frozen turkey and a bag of non-perishable food to play a round of golf.

The scene was the Quail Chase Golf Club in southern Jefferson County on Sunday, November 23rd. Quail Chase has opened its course and hosted this food-raising event for all 10 years.

The 49 foursomes donated 193 turkeys and nearly 500 pounds of food.

The food was used to prepare Thanksgiving and Christmas meals for Volunteers of America's residential programs in the Louisville area that serve veterans and homeless families and individuals.

Quail Chase Manager, Johnny Juvera, said "It's nice to see the community come together and give like they did. It's pretty remarkable. It's something that I wish everyone would do -- help feed families that need help at this time of year, this time of giving."

Volunteers of America President and CEO Jane Burks said "We are so appreciative of our partnership with Quail Chase. With their support and the support of these generous golfers, the families and individuals we serve will enjoy a wonderful Thanksgiving knowing this community cares."
